Our new promise

We are delighted to unveil to you The Judiciary Insider magazine, the latest publication by the Judiciary as one of the tools of communicating institutional programmes and initiatives. The now bigger and refreshed magazine replaces the former eight-page Judiciary Today newsletter, whose last published copies were seen around mid-2011.

Now with a strengthened Judiciary Department of Public Affairs and Communication and a Communication Strategy supporting effective dissemination of information and communication, we believe we have the right resources to have this publication on every last Friday of each month.

The Judiciary Insider is planned to focus on both institutional and people initiatives, highlighting the achievements of staff, and sharing experiences across the departments.

This magazine edition mainly highlights key activities and events of 2014, and the major happenings in the institution since the start of 2015, like the Opening of the New Law Year, Swearing-in ceremonies, and some of the innovative approaches the institution has been undertaking.

Our plan is to identify and encourage cross-functional correspondents to file stories from their respective departments. Yes, we will be expecting a lot of contribution from you (judicial officers and staff members) to the magazine in form of sharing newsworthy information and photographs, written articles, analyses and Op-Eds every month.

Together with the already active Judiciary website judicature.go.ug, and other social media such as Facebook, Twitter and our blog: judiciaryuganda.blogspot.com, the magazine will be one of the primary sources of information for the official information and positions of the Judiciary on various issues.

The platforms will be quite handy in promoting the upcoming process of rebranding the Judiciary, as the institution makes a fresh and bold promise to all the stakeholders that associate with institution and its services. We truly believe this initiative will help us develop better strategies to deliver to our stakeholders' set of expectations.

17th Annual Judges Conference

Imperial Golf view hotel, Entebbe – 22nd – 26th February 2015

Theme

The Role of the Judiciary in Transforming Uganda's Society.

Introduction

Globally and in Sub Saharan Africa, Uganda ranks very low in as far as doing business and or competitiveness of the economy is concerned. The Doing Business Index Report 2014 identified inefficiencies, corruption, wastefulness and limited use of technology as some of the reasons Uganda was lagging behind and must address to spur economic growth. The Judiciary was among the institutions which, are blamed for Uganda's poor standing in as far as doing business is concerned.

Locally, the private sector and the public consider the justice system to be slow, corrupt, inefficient and a hindrance to economic growth. Equally, the JLOS Integrity Survey and Baseline Survey 2013 found significant gaps in service delivery in the chain of justice especially in the courts. Various integrity surveys conducted by the Justice Law and Order Sector Integrity Committee have equally found significant gaps in the administration of justice which must be addressed if the Judiciary is to significantly contribute to transforming Uganda's society for the better.

The Government on the other hand, seems not to consider the Judiciary among the priority sectors of the economy in spite of the fact that Judiciary is an equal arm of the state and pivotal in harnessing the rule of law which, is a prerequisite for development.

Internally the Judiciary, continues to grapple with implementing structural reforms to address the constraints limiting the expeditious delivery of justice and factors impacting negatively on the Judiciary's abilities to transform society.

Despite the above challenges, there is a lot of appetite and consensus internally and externally that the Judiciary is critical in transforming society by ensuring the safety of the person, security of property and protecting rights of all to gainfully engage in development activities for the overall good of humanity. The Judiciary, can only play this important role if it is efficient, effective, competitive and ideologically positioned to take on its responsibilities in developing the economy.

Rationale

- To identify and agree on reforms in the Judiciary to improve Uganda's global competitiveness.
- To articulate the important role the Judiciary plays in the transformation of society especially in facilitating the priority sectors of the economy, the private sector and expansion of the Gross Domestic Product of Uganda.
- To identify key reforms that will reduce the cost of accessing justice and doing business in Uganda.
- To identify and articulate the key drivers of growth in the Judiciary.
- To show case reforms currently being implemented in the Judiciary, which have a direct bearing on the transformation of the economy.

- To carry out a stock taking exercise on the performance of the Judiciary.

On the Agenda

The role of Court Room Technology in the administration of justice.

- Engendering Performance Management, Change Management and Accountability in the Judiciary.
- Innovations for Reducing the cost, Lead times and Inequality in accessing justice in Uganda.
- The role of the Judiciary in promoting investment and development in Uganda.
- Managing relations between the arms of the Government, JLOS and the public.
- Management of Election Disputes for the 2016 General Elections.

Expected Output

- A charter of Reforms to make the Judiciary efficient, effective and responsive to the development needs of Uganda.
- Consensus on institutional and individual targets for the Judiciary.
- Partnership between the Judiciary and the private sector.
- Improved relations between the Judiciary and other arms of the government

Speakers

Speakers are to be drawn from the Judiciary, JLOS, the Government, East African Community, the World Bank and the Private Sector to speak on the key themes. ■

The Judiciary committed to administer justice

Highlights of the New Law Year - 2015

On January 16 the Judiciary opened the new Law Year at the Kampala High Court gardens in a ceremony presided over by the Ag. Chief Justice Steven Kavuma. In attendance were judicial officers, ministers, diplomats, members of parliament, the Attorney General, Peter Nyombi religious leaders and members of the Bar among others.

The opening of the new Law Year is a very important ceremony in the calendar of the Judiciary because pronouncements made at this ceremony should reinforce the important role the Judiciary plays in the lives of the people whom the judiciary should serve diligently.

Kavuma challenged judicial officers to make individual assessment if they administered justice in the previous year in accordance with Article 126 of the Constitution of Uganda. He called upon judicial officers to administer justice to all without fear or favour.

Justice Kavuma stated that the Judiciary can only carry out its responsibilities if it is independent, trusted and respected by all regardless of their standing in society.

"At the very minimum, an efficient Judiciary requires competent and well qualified Judicial officers and personnel who are trustworthy and with impeccable record of conduct. The Judiciary also requires sufficient administrative and support staff; adequate resources to meet its professional and administrative obligations; adequate infrastructure and other facilities to carry out its mandate which is rooted in practice and the law. A Judiciary, which does not meet these minimum standards, requires the support of all to rise to the occasion," Justice Kavuma said.

He went on to highlight the performance of the Judiciary in 2014, revealing that in spite of the constraints and challenges encountered by the Judiciary over the years, it has continued to perform its core function of dispensing justice to all by disposing of more cases every year. Last year, the Judiciary completed 101,990 cases against 108,584 that were registered in the same year. The courts, on average, completed 94 per cent cases which was 0.6 cases short of reaching the threshold for tackling case backlog.

"I commend all the courts for that impressive performance, especially the Magistrates Grade II and the Chief Magistrates Courts that performed exceptionally well. I hope that the courts will clear the 132,555 pending cases to give hope to the many litigants who walk the corridors of judicial premises searching for justice," Justice Kavuma said. He pledged that in 2015, the Judiciary will strengthen the capacity of the courts to dispose of cases more expeditiously. In particular, the Judiciary will implement the Performance Enhancement Project as a tool to maximize the performance of the institution.

Justice Kavuma being welcomed by members of the Bar at the New Law Year celebrations in Kampala

In a bid to dispose of cases faster, the Ag. CJ recommended the following targets for case disposal by individual officers: High Court judges 230 cases; Chief Magistrates 800; Magistrates Grade I, who are more than three years in service, 400 cases; Magistrates Grade I who are less than three years in service, 300 cases while Magistrate Grade II should each complete 300 cases per year.

The Supreme Court, on average, should complete 80 cases while the Court of Appeal, running at the full bench, should complete 800 cases in a year. With the said recommended rates of disposal, it is expected that the courts should complete an estimated 162,720 cases in 2015.

To support the achievement of those targets, the Judiciary will expand the structure and service points for justice delivery. Magisterial Areas are expected to be increased from 39 to 89 to reach out to as many people as possible. It is targeted that each district in Uganda will have at least a Magistrate Grade I, while the number of Magistrate Grade one's is expected to be increased from 173 to 250, to take care of Magistrate Grade II, who are currently being phased out.

The Judiciary intends to re-demarcate High Court circuits and increase them from the current 13 to 18. The High Court circuit of Nakawa, Jinja, Mbarara, Mbale and Gulu, which are too wide and diverse, shall be re-demarcated to create new circuits.

"We are considering decentralizing the Court of Appeal initially through circuiting at Gulu, Mbale, Fort-Portal, Jinja and Mbarara to hear cases at these points.

In the meantime the Judiciary shall continue holding up-country Court of Appeal session following up on those that have so far been held in Gulu, Mbale, Mbarara and Fort-Portal. However, in the long run the Judiciary plans to have a permanent presence of the Court of Appeal in all the regions of the country," Justice Kavuma revealed.

At the same time, with the support of development Partners and the Justice Law and Order Sector (JLOS), the Judiciary has developed a performance management tool providing for a 360 degree assessment mechanism for judicial officers. The overall objective of the performance enhancement system is to provide a scientific criterion for assessing the performance of judicial officers. ■

Women judges in social responsibility

The National Association of Women Judges in Uganda (NAWJU) is happy with the support from the Judiciary, because the support enabled NAWJU to carry out different activities in 2014. Some of the activities NAWJU carried out included;

- Participating in the International Women Judges Conference held in Arusha, Tanzania, in May 2014. The conference provided an opportunity to NAWJU members to share the best practices and network with their counterparts at international level.
- NAWJU also held an empowerment seminar for judicial officers in December 2014, under the theme: "How to Develop and Maintain a Reputation of Excellence." At the same time, NAWJU recognized retired female judicial officers for distinguished service to the Judiciary. They included retired Justices Laetitia Kikonyogo, Alice Mpagi-Bahigeine, Caroline Akello, Anna Magezi and Mary Maitum.

"We will continue to develop and inculcate the tradition of recognizing those that have served this country," said Justice Dr Esther Kisaakye Kitimbo, the chairperson of NAWJU, in her speech at the opening of the New Law Year: "We call upon the Judiciary to adopt this best practice as well."

This year, NAWJU plans to roll out a school outreach programme that aims at increasing legal and human rights awareness and knowledge among 80,000 school going children in the country. This programme will give students an opportunity to know about Uganda's justice system and enhance their understanding of their rights and responsibilities. The Association hopes that this will help create a generation of accountable citizens. The Association also hopes that in the new Law Year more attention will be given to appointment of more judicial officers.

"The National Association of Women Judges in Uganda notes with concern that to-date the two top leadership positions in the Judiciary, namely the Chief Justice and Deputy Chief Justice remain vacant.

"This is in addition to other positions at the Supreme Court and other courts. We urge the appointing authority, as the case may be, to urgently address these issues. This will go a long way in helping the Judiciary overcome the problem of undue delays in the delivery of justice within its ranks, which are caused by limited human resources," said Justice Kisaakye."

She also called upon members of the Bar to continue working with the Bench to eliminate any barriers that affect the delivery of timely and quality justice, particularly for those that may not be in position to afford paying legal fees. ■

About NAWJU

National Association of Women Judges in Uganda is a membership non-profit organisation that brings together Women Judges and Magistrates who are committed to addressing injustice occurring in communities. NAWJU works at all levels of the Judiciary to eliminate gender bias and discrimination in the justice system and community at large and make courts accessible to all. It also engages in Judicial educational programmes for both female and male Judicial officers.

NAWJU objectives include advancing women and children's rights to equal justice; promoting increased access to the courts by women and children; conducting legal research on gender equality and human rights; and promoting sharing of best practices with Judges in other jurisdiction on issues of critical concern to women and children.

Make Judiciary autonomous-UJOA

The Uganda Judicial Officers' Association (UJOA) wants the Judiciary to be autonomous. "The independence of the Judiciary cannot be effectively realised if the institution is not autonomous in respect of finances and personnel" says UJOA president Vincent Emmy Mugabo.

Speaking during the opening of the New Law Year in January, Mugabo said there is urgent need to pass the Judiciary Administration Bill, which has been in limbo for long "which we believe has hindered the effective administration of the Judiciary". UJOA says budget allocation for Judiciary should be at least equivalent to Parliament at 4.4 per cent to tackle the perennial concerns of the courts.

Mugabo noted that since 1995, no solid effort has been made to operationalize the fundamental provisions of the Constitution of Uganda relating to the Judiciary. The objective of this Bill is to operationalise provisions of the constitution relating to the Judiciary, administration of justice, improve efficiency and effectiveness of the courts, strengthen the independence of courts and streamline the administration of Courts. He said this bill should be passed into law.

Mugabo also lamented about unfilled staff positions in the Judiciary. Quoting a Daily Monitor newspaper article of April 20, 2014 in which the head of Judicial Service Commission Hon. Justice James Ogoola, described the Judiciary as an ill staffed, stressed and sluggish institution to effectively enforce the rule of law. The same article called the Judiciary a disabled institution which has struggled along without a leader for more than a year, leading to an unacceptable situation where the third arm of government is unable to effectively function.

Available information shows that there are huge staffing gaps in the Judiciary. The needed staff in the Judiciary include 33 judges in the High Court, 20 Justices in the Court of Appeal, and four justices in the Supreme Court. This shortage has resulted in a situation where a High Court Judge has an average of over 400 cases to handle annually.

Reducing the issue of case backlog in courts goes hand in hand with the appointment of the judicial officers. Appointing these officers is the role of Judicial Service Commission and the President of the Republic of Uganda.

The UJOA President highlighted some Association achievements made during 2014 that included: the successful holding of the 5th Magistrates' Conference that took place in Mukono on in September; the UJOA Annual General Meeting and networking with other judicial officers associations inside and outside East Africa. UJOA collaborated with the Commonwealth Magistrates and Judges Association, East African Magistrates and Judges Association, among others.

Judiciary headquarters: Bidders visit site

An artistic impression of the proposed Judiciary headquarters to be constructed at the Kampala High Court complex

On February 16, 2015 the Justice, Law and Order Sector held the JLOS House pre-bid briefing with various bidders for the JLOS House Project. The briefing, held at Grand Imperial Hotel, Kampala was an opportunity for bidders to interface with the JLOS structures in charge of the project – notably the Transaction Advisory Committee (TAC) that was mandated by the JLOS Steering Committee to provide oversight and coordination of the JLOS House PPP project.

Earlier on, the Ministry of Justice and Constitutional Affairs on behalf of the Justice, Law and Order Sector (JLOS) had on January 30, 2015 issued a Request for Proposal (RFP) to nine (9) firms. The bidders were also given draft project agreements in respect to the design, review, construction, financing and management of the JLOS House Project under the Public Private Partnership (PPP).

The call for RFP followed submission of expressions of interest for the role of lead investor for the JLOS House project by thirteen (13) international firms in July 2014. The house will be constructed in Naguru, Kampala.

During the meeting, bidders were given an overview of the project and the key RFP provisions. Bidders were also given an opportunity to ask questions. Later on in the day, the bidders were taken on a site tour of the proposed JLOS House Towers and Police Headquarters in Naguru, a Kampala suburb; and to the proposed Appellate Court on Plot 1, The Square.

This was followed by one-on-one clarification sessions between the bidders and the JLOS House PPP Transaction Advisory Committee (TAC) on February 17th 2015 at the Ministry of Justice and Constitutional affairs (JLOS Secretariat).

The short-listed bidders who are to respond the JLOS House PPP project RFP include: Eiffage Concessions (France), Consolidated Contractors group and Morganti (Greece), China State Construction and Engineering Company Limited (China), Shikun and Binui Arison Group and SBI International Holdings

AG. (Israel), Beijing Uni-Construction Group Company Limited (China), Mota-Engil (Portugal), and China Jiangxi Corporation for International Economic and Technical Cooperation (China). Others are: Complant-China Complete Plant and Import and Export Corporation Limited (China), and Group 5 Property Developments (PTY) Limited and Twed Consulting Company Limited (South Africa).

The JLOS House Complex is a multi-million dollar project whose purpose is to provide decent accommodation to all the JLOS institutions through one-stop centre offices. This will enable government to provide public services in a cost effective and responsive manner. For example a person following up a criminal complaint should be able to interact with the Police, the Directorate of Public Prosecutions (DPP) and the Court within the same complex reducing the cost of access to justice and at the same time leveraging the benefits of technology and modern office concepts.

The complex when complete will provide accommodation to government ministries, institutions and specifically the Judiciary, to house the Supreme Court, Court of Appeal, Constitutional Court and the Criminal, Anti-Corruption and International Criminal Divisions of the High Court. Other JLOS institutions to be accommodated in the JLOS House are: Ministry of Justice and Constitutional Affairs, Ministry of Internal Affairs, Ministry of Gender, Labour and Social Development, Directorate of Citizenship and Immigration Control, Directorate of Public Prosecutions, Uganda Police, Uganda Prisons, Uganda Registration Services Bureau, Uganda Law Reform Commission, Centre for Arbitration and Dispute Resolution, Judicial Service Commission and the Tax Appeals Tribunal.

On completion the entire JLOS House project will provide 80,000 square meters of office space and save Government five million dollars which it spends annually on renting office premises for JLOS institutions. JLOS' goal is to reduce the cost of accessing public services through cutting public costs of accessing our services. The sector would like to see Government services being provided as service for the people by the people.

Related and interconnected services of the 17 JLOS institutions will be provided in one central location thus reducing on the time, cost, stress and inconvenience of accessing public services. Services such as registration of companies, court services, law enforcement and payment of fees will be provided at the convenience of the public rather than Government.

Quick facts about JLOS House:

- To be constructed at Naguru, Kampala on Plot 1 under Public Private Partnership arrangement
- JLOS House to be built with cutting edge green and intelligent building technology
- Project to cost approximately $79 million dollars (approx. 208 Billion Shillings)
- JLOS House will accommodate the following institutions:

Judiciary, Ministry of Justice and Constitutional Affairs, Ministry of Internal Affairs, Ministry of Gender, Labor and Social Development, Directorate of Citizenship and Immigration Control, Directorate of Public Prosecutions, Uganda Police, Uganda Prisons, Uganda Registration Services Bureau, Uganda Law Reform Commission, Centre for Arbitration and Dispute Resolution, Judicial Service Commission and the Tax Appeals Tribunal

- On completion the entire JLOS House project will provide 80,000 square meters of office space
- Project when complete to save Government $5m which it spends annually on renting office premises for JLOS institutions.
- JLOS to allocate 21 billion shillings over a period of three years towards the budget of the JLOS House. Rest of the funding to be provided by GoU through Public-private partnerships, contractor-sourced funding.

Innovations to tackle case backlog

Some of the prisoners awaiting trial on various offences.

Over the years, the Judiciary has been struggling with the problem of case backlog. Case backlog means work that is behind schedule or cases that should have been disposed of but remain pending. Thus, the well-known adage of justice delayed is justice denied puts the judiciary to task.

In order to tackle this task, alternative justice has been recommended as a mechanism that would greatly help reduce case backlog in courts. Indeed, the results from the pilot projects of plea bargain and small claims procedure are a testimony of the effectiveness of this alternative justice procedure.

Plea bargain and small claims procedure additional reforms the Judiciary has undertaken in effort to deal with case backlog. For example, previous reforms included 13 High Court Circuits, 7 High Court Divisions, 49 magisterial areas, and District Court Circuit structures established in the past few years to ease work and take justice delivery services closer to the people. In its plans this Law Year, the Judiciary will expand circuits of the High Court to 18, Magisterial Areas to 89, High Court Judges to 82, Court of Appeal Justices to 32 as well as giving each district two magistrates. The Court of Appeal has equally intensified holding of sessions outside Kampala and disposing of hundreds of pending cases in the countryside.

Therefore while working with the Justice Law and Order Sector (JLOS) framework, the Judiciary has devised a number of innovative alternative mechanisms of dispensing justice to manage case backlog and congestion in prisons.

Plea bargain

A plea bargain is an agreement in a criminal case between the prosecutor and the accused person whereby the latter agrees to plead guilty to a particular charge in return for some concession from the prosecutor. Plea bargain is already widely used in the developed world.

A voluntary plea of guilt under this mechanism may see the number or severity of the charges against an accused person or their punishment reduced. Prosecutors encourage pleas of guilty under this programme to save time and resources for other cases and reduce the number of trials that judges need to oversee. It is also a chance to turn some accused persons into state witnesses.

Small Claim Procedure

This is another form of mediation in matters arising out of the supply of goods, debts and rent – not exceeding Shs10 million. The parties to a claim are mediated by a judicial officer to reach a quick agreement, without involving lawyers, and not going through the usually lengthy and costly court process. Agreements from Small Claims Procedure settlements are executed like any other court order, except that there is no chance for appeal.

According to Erias Kisawuzi, the Judiciary spokesman, previously the Commercial Court was initially giving more priority to parties with claims of at least Shs50 million yet there were small income earners without this kind of money who were being locked out; hence the need for small claims procedure. Kisawuzi says with small claims procedure cases are being disposed of within a month or less, thereby helping in solving the case backlog issue.

Fifteen courts are operating the small claims procedure on a pilot basis and soon the project will be rolled out across the country. ■

Justice Kavuma tips Tax Appeals Tribunal

Acting Chief Justice, Steven Kavuma with members of the Tax Appeal Tribunal at the High Court in Kampala

Justice Steven B.K. Kavuma, the acting Chief Justice, wants the Tax Appeals Tribunal (TAT) to have presence in more parts of the country to serve taxpayers better.

"For it to be better known and appreciated by the taxpayers countrywide, it should endeavor to establish its presence in more than the four regional areas where they currently operate," he said, urging the Tribunal to expand beyond the Mbale, Gulu, Mbarara and Arua centers.

"Taxpayers are all over the country and should be enabled to easily access the services of the Tribunal. All this should be accompanied by extensive public information programs about the Tribunal's programs and procedures." Justice Kavuma made the remarks on January 29, 2015 at the Judiciary headquarters in Kampala while swearing in a five-man Tribunal membership recently appointed by the Minister of Finance, Planning and Economic Development, Maria Kiwanuka.

TAT's new membership includes Dr Asa Mugenyi (chairman), and members: Dr Stephen B. Akabway, George Wilson Mugerwa, Christine Nalubega Katwe and Siraj Ali. Justice Kavuma urged the new membership to work hard to clear the outstanding cases that may have built up in the past four months following the expiry of the tenure of the old Tribunal.

He also encouraged the team to focus more on building its internal capacity through appropriate training of its Members and the support staff including the area of customer care.

The Tribunal was established in 1997 as a specialized court to handle disputes arising from the taxation decisions of the URA.

"I am glad to note that according to the Tax Appeals Tribunal Act, the Tribunal is independent and impartial. This is an essential element that should be maintained if justice is to be done in matters that come before the Tribunal," he said.

Hon. Justice Kavuma commended the Tribunal, the taxpayers, the URA, the lawyers, the accountants and all the other stakeholders who have, in one way or another, assisted TAT in its endeavors to fulfill its mandate. ■

Talking sexual minorities rights

By Olive Kazaarwe Mukwaya

On the 8th February 2015, Her Worship Joyce Kavuma and I traveled to South Africa to attend a short course on Sexual Minorities Rights in Africa. This was upon the invitation of the Centre of Human Rights, a department at the Faculty of law at the University of Pretoria. The week long course was attended by participants from a total of 18 African countries. Uganda and Nigeria however, featured quite prominently in the discussions concerning the absence of protection of the rights of sexual minorities by lawful authorities. It is against this background that I thought it prudent to share some of the highlights of this short program.

1995 provides for non adoption of a State religion.

- Uganda is therefore a secular state. There is still evidence that homophobia; the fear of or revulsion at homosexuals; is fueled by the 'morality of the majority'. In other words even some of those who do not believe in God agree that the act is unacceptable to them.
- Professor Frans Viljoen argued that in order for the morality of the majority to stand, criminality of the act by state actors had to be linked to a demonstrable harm. So he posed the question; where two consenting same sex adults engage in the act in the

had been violated by the State. The State has appealed that judgment and the appellate court has not yet pronounced itself on the matter:

- While Section 145(c) of the Penal Code Act criminalizes all carnal knowledge against the order of nature between persons of the same sex and also between heterosexual persons; law enforcement agencies are more inclined to arrest and prosecute homosexual persons than heterosexuals under this law.
- Two international human rights conventions which have been ratified by Uganda; The African Charter on Human and People's rights and the Universal Declaration of Human Rights both explicitly provide all people equal protection under the law. The question therefore is whether this protection does not extend to LGBTI persons? A question for our Constitutional court perhaps?
- Finally, out of the Bantu people of Africa, arose the notion of Ubuntu. A term used to denote the culture of mutual respect and tolerance among the people. Some participants said it is an ancient African concept which holds true even today. There are no hierarchies in Ubuntu and therefore no minorities.
- On the continuum that gauges the position of countries on the LGBTI rights, Uganda does not hold a progressive position. The acts are criminalized. But even in South Africa whose Constitution recognizes same sex relationships, homophobia is still quite high. The debate therefore rages on in Africa and the rest of the world. The Judiciaries in all these countries do play a key role in this regard and so does the Uganda Judiciary.

Ms Kazaarwe with other participants attending sexual minorities workshop in South Africa recently

- Sexual minorities are not limited to Lesbians (women) and Gays (men). They also include Bisexuals, Transgender and Intersex (LGBTI).
- Violence against homosexuals is quite common in a number of African Countries and around the world.
- The moral argument against homosexuality in general is that holy teachings explicitly forbid it.
- Article 7 of the Uganda Constitution privacy of their home, how does that harm the majority who do not agree with the practice?

- Adrian Jjuuko, a local human right activist, presented on the state of affairs in Uganda. He highlighted a case involving a one Ugandan lesbian, Victor Mukasa, who won against the Government of Uganda after successfully arguing that her right to privacy enshrined in the Constitution
